ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A stored image is delivered via a network in response to requests from receiving terminals. Information concerning the color properties of the receiving terminals is acquired, and, based on the acquired information, the stored image is color-converted into images in accordance with the color properties of each receiving terminal. The color-converted stored images are the delivered. An output profile for each receiving terminal is used to improve color reproductivity.

5